

Questions about lazy loading and why it's enabled by default?

I've been reading the relevant discussions: TRAC 44427, and issues #18, and #4 in this repository but I still have questions about the rationale for making lazy loading the default without providing a way to change the behavior when needed.

I can see three cases where images should not automatically lazy load or the option should be given to the theme developer to choose whether lazy loading is acceptable or not:

- Blog Header images
- Single pages post featured images
- Content above the fold
